

After a thousand years the monster rises warily to the surface. Has anything changed?
 No- the hills and glens are the same as they have been since the Ice Age.
 No other monsters move upon the land or water. He is still alone.

LOCH NESS MONSTER SONG

Verse 3

His thoughts turn to his beloved in the tropical waters of Norway. She was so beautiful - so young.
But by now she must be at least 12,008, and may be starting to lose her looks.
He laments the transitory nature of existence.

LOCH NESS MONSTER SONG

Verse 4

His tail thrashes in fury as he spots a group of monster watchers.
They completely fail to see him, as in fact he looks nothing like a pleisiosaur, and never has done.
Seized with rage at the way his existence has been trivialised, he hurls a curse across the loch and sinks into the despairing icy depths for another thousand years.
